METE AND MET.

Up in Alaska there used to be a district attorney who was long on name oratory but short on education. Once while prosecuting a big case, coming to the finish of his argument, he leaned across the rail and made this plea: "All I ask of you gentlemen of the jury is that you now retire and mete out justice as she deserves to be met." —St. Louis Mirror.

"Yes," answered the woman tartly. "He learned his wisdom from them." —Rocky Mountain News.

S. S. SMITH IN FAVOR OF THE HALF-DAY SCHOOL

Editor Standard: A considerable interest is being taken in the advocacy by Prof. Mills of the half-day school plan, and his desire to give it a trial in comparison with the present all study and no work for the child.

It is not our intention to defend the school superintendent, nor the principles of the half-day school, from the attacks made upon them. They are ample able to take care of themselves. Neither do we intend to answer many questions of detail, some of which will belong to the school board and their attorney, some to Superintendent Mills, his principals and teachers, and some to the parents, should the half-day plan be adopted.

The question that is really open for discussion is not whether the professors are clear in every detail of the plan they have suggested, but whether the general plan of a half-day of school for our children, the other half to be given to some kind of remunerative employment or labor when the parent so desires, and when they do not, to some kind of school manual training and to play, is desirable.

Whether a majority of the parents would favor such a plan without more discussion, we cannot say, but it appeals very strongly to some of us who have been unable to keep all our children in school until they have completed the high school work.

Take up the present enrollment in the several grades, and you will find in the first six grades about 4,400 children enrolled, while in the six higher grades about 1,600, and of these in the high school about three to one are girls.

What does this prove? It does not prove that girls have a greater desire for learning than boys, but that boys, being able to earn more money than girls, are taken out of school or quit school before they have more than the rudiments of an education for the purpose of becoming "bread winners."

Under our present system, about two-thirds of our children find it necessary to quit school from the end of the sixth grade to the end of the eighth grade and seek positions as permanent bread winners, many of whom, before they have attained manhood, are earning from ten to twenty dollars per week, and thus actually competing with the full-grown man in the labor market.

As we view the new system under contemplation, half-day school and half-day work, its effect would be to keep our children all in school until they have graduated from high school, instead of forcing them into permanent industrial positions with scarcely any education at all.

If the 2,000 children in Ogden today, who have quit school without having seen inside of the high school building, were in school a half day and working the other half, the real bread winner for the family would not be crowded nearly so much with "child labor" as he is today, not even if the 1,600 who are now in high school were turned into the same labor market, especially as more than two-thirds of these are girls, and at least two-thirds of those who have quit the school without an education, are boys.

It is not the purpose of this plan to throw "child labor" on to the market, but to keep it off the market as nearly as possible until all children have an education. In other words, to adapt the school to the needs of the child.

Another feature that commends itself to some of us, is that habits found in youth are apt to influence us through life, and one of the best habits to be formed is that of industry—work. Not that we consider going to school and following out the school curriculum—play, is the hardest kind of work, but it is all brain work and it is just as important to form habits in youth of working with our hands as it is to form the habit of brain work.

The young man who has formed the habit between the ages of 12 and 18 years of working with both brain and brawn will surely in life have the one who is crammed with book lore and has not learned to work with his hands, and he will surely succeed above the one who has quit school at the end of the sixth, seventh or eighth grade, and given all his young life to earning money.

One other point. So far, we have discussed this plan as it pertains to the student in the six higher grades, but we feel it is as equally important for the lower grades. Most all educators and physicians will agree that three hours a day is sufficient for any child to be in school between the ages of 6 and 12 years. Then we will ask what shall we do with these 4,400 children in Ogden during the other half day. We cannot put them to work, as that would be child labor, so what shall we do with them?

We answer, build play grounds and furnish proper instructors in play to take care of them. It is much more important to teach the young child how to play well, than it is to teach the older child in a gymnasium. We are not making an argument against the gymnasium, but it is by far more important that we have plenty and well directed play grounds for the younger children than it is that we have gymnasiums for the older ones.

This is a big question, so recognized by every one who has given it thought. So let us discuss it thoroughly and surely something good for the children, who are turned into the business world without proper education, will come out of it.

THE "SIDEWALK CHIEF." The professional fire fighter is too frequently face to face with danger to regard fires in an esthetic light, but the feelings of the amateur with a passion for "running with the machine" occasionally show an epicurean flavor.

While running to a fire in a large town in Massachusetts one citizen overtook another who was going in the same direction.

"Oh, dear!" the latter gasped, quite out of breath. "I hope it's not the stove lining works; I've seen that twice already!"—Youth's Companion.

The Central Business College

Gives a thoroughly Modern and Practical Business Training.

We teach Gregg Shorthand because it is the most modern. It is easy to learn, easy to write and easy to read. It is taught in more schools today, than all other systems combined. Not merely statements—just facts. The Latter-day Saints College at Salt Lake, the High School, and two of the largest Business Colleges in Salt Lake City teach Gregg Shorthand. We can save you from three to six months with this system.

Touch Typewriting, we teach thoroughly. Every student has the use of the machine three hours daily. This is necessary in order to secure proficiency in this subject. 90 per cent of failures are due to a lack of efficiency on the typewriter.

Bookkeeping. We teach the most modern system of bookkeeping thoroughly and practically. An old out-of-date system is a detriment rather than an advantage to the student.

We invite investigation of our work, and our methods in this subject. Having had practical experience both as a bookkeeper and as a stenographer we know what training is necessary to deliver the goods.

We also teach Commercial English, Spelling, Punctuation, Penmanship, Commercial Arithmetic, and letter-writing.

A FEW FACTS FOR YOU TO CONSIDER:

All our work is up-to-date.

We expect to conduct this school on business principles, the same as any other business house in Ogden.

We have no vacations. This will enable you to complete your course without interruption.

We secure positions as soon as our students are competent.

We hold evening sessions from 7:30 to 9:30 Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.
